My Daze Recycling

To help promote the statewide recycling effort, Pennsylvania's glass container manufacturers have organized a speaker's bureau for appearances between civic and community groups.

"Public awareness is going to be the key to successful recycling," said Douglas L. Gifford, Executive Director of the non-profit Pennsylvania Glass Recycling Corporation. "The glass container industry wants to do its part to help people understand how recycling works."

Gifford noted that glass is 100% recyclable. Used bottles and jars can be melted down to be made into new containers without loss in quality. This process can be repeated again and again and again in true closed loop fashion.

Speakers provided by the glass container plants will discuss how glass is made, quality requirements for recycling and what the industry is doing to make recycling a reality.

Orthonoff said that the speakers will be scheduled at no charge on an available basis. The program can be 15 to 45 minutes long, depending upon the group's requirements.

More information is available by writing: Pennsylvania Glass Recycling Corporation, 559 North Second Street, Harrisburg, Pa. 17101.
